

The tug William E. Gladwin arrived with two barges, having lost four on the way. One of these sank, but the crew of two men were saved. Two proceeded under sail, while the fourth tried to anchor off Point Judith, but drifted about with two men, Lester and Antonio Lubin, laboring all night at the oars. They were taken off today in a thoroughly exhausted condition. Many fishing vessels and yachts in the harbor sustained much damage.

He crew were all shipped at this port and numbered nineteen.

DIED WITH CURSES ON HIS LIPS.

Execution, at Morris, Ill., of James Maxwell, Convicted of an Unusually Brutal Murder.

MORRIS, Ill., Oct. 17.—James Maxwell was hanged at 10:47 this morning for the murder of Charles Decker in June last. Maxwell was the coolest man about the jail. Last night, when the sheriff showed some trepidation at the task before him, Maxwell said: "Brace up, old man; you are much more troubled about this than I am." He slept well and ate breakfast with apparent relish this morning. His spiritual advisers received a severe shock this morning when they went in to administer the last words of comfort to him. An unexpected reporter had been before them. He had assumed the guise of a minister with the idea of getting an interview. He failed, for when the newspaper representative began to question him as to his spiritual welfare, Maxwell threw off the religious mask which he had hitherto worn and drove his visitor from him with a string of curses of the most sulphurous sort.

When the sheriff began to read the death warrant in a trembling voice, Maxwell interrupted with a roar that gave the sheriff and let us get through this thing as soon as possible." His wish was complied with, and he was at once conducted to the gallows. A brief prayer was offered, the prisoner was pinioned and the noose adjusted. The sheriff asked him if he had anything to say. His reply was a complaint that the sheriff had put the noose on him wrong, which the execution took place, so that the crowd outside could see him. The sheriff then cut the cord and the body fell. In six minutes Maxwell was dead. He had been in the jail for a long time, and the sheriff had killed himself a dozen times if he had wanted to.

The crime for which Maxwell was executed was one that was attended with a brutality rarely found, even in the annals of crime. On the night of June 25 last the house of Charles Decker, at this place, was entered by two men for the purpose of robbery. Decker, a man about fifty years old, was aroused, and met the intruders in the hallway. One of them beat him over the head with a hatchet, fracturing his skull and inflicting other injuries, from the combined effects of which he died. His assailants left him lying on the floor and entered another apartment, where they were met by Mrs. Decker, the mother of their victim. She was knocked down and rendered insensible by a blow from the hatchet that had killed her husband. The murderers then ransacked the house, but an alarm being given by a servant of the family, they fled without securing any plunder. A party of citizens searched the country about the village, and in two hours and a half Maxwell was captured. He was taken to the jail, and the following day a negro named Fitzgibbon was also arrested. Enough evidence was obtained implicating the pair in the murder, their guilt matter of little doubt, and the prisoners narrowly escaped lynching.

Enraged Barber Cuts His Tormentor's Throat.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 17.—A bloody assault that narrowly escaped a fatal ending created intense excitement in East Albany last night. Charles Harris, the victim, an ex-striker, while passing the barber-shop of John Loftus, in company with James Wilson, took occasion to stop and taunt Loftus for shaving a "scab" railroad man. The two then passed on, and were followed by the infuriated barber, who seized Harris, and drawing back his head, drew a keen-edged razor, with which he cut the throat. As soon as possible Harris was removed to a physician's office, where it required thirteen stitches to sew up the wound. Loftus was arrested. The trouble is understood to have been the outgrowth of the recent railroad strike.

THE BIG LUMBER FAILURE.

Mr. Peters Gives a List of Firms Involved in His Assignment—Colleges Interested.

MANISTE, Mich., Oct. 17.—Friends of Mr. Peters say that the R. G. Peters Company's assets will care for the liabilities. Mr. Peters' individual liabilities are probably $2,500,000, and his assets, nominally, considerably over that amount. It is predicted in financial circles in Chicago that at least two hundred concerns, large and small, mostly in Michigan and Wisconsin, will be affected by the failure.

Two or three public institutions will find themselves very directly interested in the failure. Several years ago it was announced that Mr. Peters had given $50,000 to Oberlin College, and that the Congregational Theological Seminary at Chicago. Oberlin has since built a large and elegant building, and christened it after the late Mr. Peters.

There was a run on the Manistee National Bank this morning, which was promptly closed. The institution is reported to be in an emergency, and is simply able to meet the run without going outside its own resources. It has at present nearly $100,000 in cash in its vaults. The excitement here has subsided.

Mr. Peters was interviewed this afternoon, and in speaking of the condition of the various firms in which he is interested, he says Butters & Peters, of Lexington, N. C., are in good shape. Peters & Morrison, of Menominee, were on a good deal of account in due form, and that will then be decided upon its merits. You will please understand that this bureau has entire confidence in the enumeration it has made of the inhabitants of the city of New York, and will adhere to the same until convinced by proper proofs that it is incorrect. It is not a question of degree that demands a re-enumeration under the statute in such cases made and provided. You will please further take notice that the results of the census by the national authorities has preceded so far that the result of the enumeration of the population of New York is announced within a few days, and no great delay will be allowed you in presenting your case and the evidence you may have to support it.
